Budget Report Recommends Cut Of $16 Million

By VINCENT THOMAS
Assemblyman, 68th District

The job of reviewing the massive $3.66 billion budget for 1964-65 would be far tougher for all of us if it were not for the patient and expert digging for facts by our Legislative Analyst and his staff. The results of this labor, set forth in his 877 page report, give us specific recommendations for reductions in many items requested. In addition, the report indicates many areas, together totalling more than $100 million, which need special legislative attention.

Apart from its current significance in connection with the upcoming budget, the Analyst's report has immeasurable value to us because of the long range studies of state fiscal and administrative problems which it features. By thus tipping us off, years ahead, of major questions with which we must struggle, the report helps conserve the time and energy of many committees in both houses, and helps us come up with better legislation.

Once again in this latest report the Analyst reminds us of the painful, inescapable fact that only about one-third of the total state spending program is under legislative control. The other two-thirds, including such costly matters as education, highways and welfare, is imbedded in statutes already on the books, or in the Constitution itself. As a result, the budget cuts which can be made in the true interest of economy and efficiency are very limited. Little possibility for slashing cuts ever arises.

Another study of school costs carries a recommendation for reduction in the number of school district to 58. This is so important that I will discuss it later. The third relates to the complicated textbook problem.

THE REPORT includes three of the long range studies to which I referred above, and each of them gives us food for thought. In the first, the outlook for state financing and taxation is explored. Our attention is called to the fact that the proposed budget is only narrowly in balance with the present tax structure, and it is predicted that in the 1965 session we will be confronted again with the serious problem of meeting constantly increased expenditure proposals by levying new or higher taxes. He also comments at length on our use of bond issues to finance capital construction, and predicts that if the trend continues, interest requirements alone will climb close to $200 million per year within the next decade.

Based on his scrutiny of the budget, the Analyst has recommended reductions totalling $16.7 million in general fund, special fund, and construction bond funds. The largest cuts in operating funds would be in Corrections, $3.368 million; Youth Authority, $1.889 million; and Education, $1.381 million. The largest cut in construction bond funds would be in Corrections, $1.368 million, and the greatest in local assistance would be a cut in small craft harbor grants of $1.35 million.

In addition to these specific cuts, the Analyst has called for special review of other items adding up to $114.3 million. Most of this total is for construction bond funds, $87.8 million. A noteworthy item which he says needs thorough legislative investigation is the proposed $13.9 million for free textbooks in the public schools.

Teaching Techniques Demonstration Slated

Commander Paul A. Terry, USN (Ret.) regional vice president of the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, will be the principal speaker at a general session of the Torrance Good Teaching Conference Saturday at South High School. Commander Terry will speak at a 9:30 a.m. session to be held in the cafeteria at the school.

The Good Teaching Conference, an annual event to inform citizens of the community about the Torrance schools and their teachers, will begin at 8:15 a.m. with registration and a hospitality tour.

MORE THAN 80 teachers will give demonstrations of teaching techniques during the sessions. The conference, open to the public, is being held for the third time since its inauguration in 1961.

Demonstrations will run the gamut in education, ranging from art and basic skills in the kindergarten and primary grades to highly specialized honors courses in the district's four high schools.

The techniques will be displayed through actual classroom situations, with students actually taking the classes participating in many cases. Among the subjects to be treated are music, language arts and English, mathematics, science, social studies, foreign languages, communications, home making, and industrial arts.

SPECIAL techniques to be demonstrated include team teaching, departmentalization, work study programs, and special education techniques. Demonstrations will begin following Commander Terry's address. The 45-minute sessions have been scheduled at 10:30 and 11:30 a.m. A luncheon will be held in the cafeteria at 12:30.

Robert McSpadden, a South High teacher, is general chairman for this year's Good Teaching Conference. More than 80 teachers will participate in the conference.
